MEMORANDUM

TO: Members of the Council of Trustees

FROM: Paul M. Oliaro

SUBJECT: Addition to Code of Conduct
Rams Eye View Handbook

DATE: April 25, 2002

Printed below is an addition to our Code of Conduct in the Rams Eye View Handbook. This addition is to be included in our Disciplinary Process section of the handbook on page 81. It will be included under the section entitled II Sanctions; and will be added as Item 13.

The proposed text is as follows:

13. Fines: Students found responsible for violating the alcohol and/or alcohol containers violation (# 7) will be fined as follows: First Offense - $50 - and participation in the Alcohol.edu educational experience; Second Offense - $100 - and participation in the Life Skills Educational Seminar; Third Offense - $200. The student must make payment directly to the Bursar's Office within 30 days from the exit date of the Sanction Assessment Form. This mandatory fine will be in addition to the other range of sanctions as described above (IIA,1-12). The only exception to this fine is in the event a student produces documentation from District Court verifying that the student did pay appropriate fines and court costs for the same offense; the offense will be counted for progressive fining purposes.

According to our legal counsel, this proposal is consistent with the Board of Governors policy which allows for a Fine Sanction. We have reviewed this proposal internally, with students and with the President, and feel that it is an appropriate step to reduce alcohol related offenses.

Council of Trustees Faculty Emeritus Award – 2002

Mr. Phillip B. Donley

Mr. Donley came to West Chester University in 1965 as an Associate Professor of Health and Physical Education. He was also hired to serve as the Head Athletic Trainer at that time. Professor Donley was clearly a visionary for his field of athletic training, athletics and the academics involved. He was a very valued and highly respected faculty member and held high expectations for athletes, coaches and his colleagues. One example of his vision was being the first to hire a full-time female college athletic trainer in the United States, and he expanded the program into a co-ed status that was one of the first in the country. During Professor Donley's tenure at West Chester University, he was instrumental in turning a "service oriented" athletic training program to athletes and teams into a major for Athletic Training Certification. This set the stage for the program to develop into its own Department of Sports Medicine in the School of Health Sciences. Professor Donley's reputation in the athletic training and physical therapy professions has earned him numerous state and national honors. In 1986, Professor Donley was named the "Distinguished Athletic Training Educator of the Year", and in 1991 he was elected to the Hall of Fame of the National Athletic Trainers Association. Professor Donley has brought national recognition to West Chester University by his excellent reputation and exemplary service within his field.

Council of Trustees Emeritus Award – 2002

Mr. Frank Q. Helms

Upon his retirement from West Chester University in 2001, Mr. Helms had served as Director of Library Services for over thirty-five years. During those years, Mr. Helms turned a relatively small academic library into a state-of-the-art university library. Upon his arrival to campus in 1966, the library's book collection numbered 77,000 volumes and a periodical collection of 640 titles. The current book collection totals more than 580,000 volumes and the periodical collection has quadrupled in size. During Mr. Helms' tenure, he helped to integrate technology into the library by updating services offered by the library. Mr. Helms' vision and innovative spirit kept the Francis Harvey Green Library on the cutting edge. Mr. Helms played a major role in collaboration with the State System of Higher Education by his work as a member of the Library Council (SHELCO). His interaction with various constituencies on the West Chester University campus enabled many people to experience Mr. Helms' abilities as a decision-maker, a problem solver, and innovative thinker and a diplomat. He has also made significant contributions to both regional and state organizations in his professional field by holding elected and appointed offices. Over the years, Mr. Helms excelled with fundraising success as an advocate for the library. Most recently, he worked with the Development Office to establish an endowment for the library of $1,500,000. His accomplishments have been outstanding, and he has a history of being a dedicated and valued member of the West Chester University community.

Dear Members of the Academic Recognition Committee:

I can think of no scholar and teacher who more deserves to receive the Council of Trustees Achievement Award than Dr. Stacey Schlau, an innovative and enthusiastic leader in her fields of research. Because I do not know Dr. Schlau personally, my opinion is based exclusively on her published work and her presentations at national and international conferences. I shall not list her numerous publications and scholarly presentations, which are part of a professional record known to you. Instead, I shall present for your consideration a summary of her impact on Hispanism.

Dr. Schlau would be the first to credit predecessors in the fields in which she has excelled, but without exaggeration I qualify her as a pioneer in the same. She has brought attention to neglected fields of inquiry, brought together disciplines that had operated independently and brought along other scholars in her wake. Panels, symposia and publishing fields exist today that did not exist twenty years ago, thanks to her keen intellect and her boundless enthusiasm. I have no doubt that she will continue to push boundaries, to widen the scope of inquiry for Hispanists, by producing first-rate articles and books and sharing her findings with colleagues in the United States and abroad.

Her influence on other scholars is enormous. One need only pick up a book on colonial women published in Spanish America or Spain to conclude that her influence extends to academics and social activists abroad. Her influence is both general and particular: general, because any scholar who writes on a related field can use her publications as models for approaching a similar scholarly problem; particular, because her publications are based on painstaking, original research and become authoritative for other scholars who wish to write about the same topics or authors.

Just as important, Dr. Schlau is shaping scholars-to-be: she is creating a legacy for herself and her University. Proof of this lies in the fact that her books and articles are required reading in my graduate courses and for every graduate student here at the University of Virginia who is writing a Master's or Ph.D. thesis on women and the Inquisition in Spain or Spanish America; conventual cultures in Spain or Spanish America; rhetorical conventions and religious women; Teresa de Cartagena; Teresa de Avila; orthodox and unorthodox discourses in the New World; sexuality and demonology; etc. Believe me when I say that thesis topics abound in the footnotes of any publication by Dr. Schlau.

Many scholars communicate effectively with other scholars, and some communicate effectively with other scholars and scholars-to-be. Dr. Schlau is a scholar who both demonstrates excellence in all she presents and in all she writes and teaches students what it means to be a scholar engaged with one's materials and one's world.

I recommend her to you wholeheartedly and without reservations.

Sincerely,

Ruth Hill, Ph.D.

Dear Committee Members:

It is a great pleasure to write this letter of evaluation of Professor Stacey Schlau's scholarly achievements in the field of Hispanic studies and Latin American Literature. After reviewing her publications and materials in support of her nomination, I am pleased to strongly recommend her for the Council of Trustees Achievement Award that recognizes distinguished scholarly achievements by a current faculty member of West Chester University.

First, I should mention that I have been quite familiar with Professor Schlau's books and eminence in the field for many years. Foremost, she is one of the most engaging, original and dazzling scholars in Hispanic studies and a pioneer for her critical and archival work on Latin American colonial literature and early modern women studies. Her stature in Academia is not only based on her research and writing, but also on her well-recognized leadership, commitment and professionalism. Two and a half years ago, I was elected to the Modern Language Association's executive committee for Colonial Latin American Literature, and I was able to witness the transformation in organization and planning it took place after Professor Schlau became president of this important committee, which sets the agenda for the field.

As a graduate student at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, I remember when her first book, the bilingual edition and translation Untold Sisters (a collaboration with Electa Arenal) was published and, immediately became required reading in one of the courses on Early Modern Spanish Literature in my program. Before the publication of this collection in 1989, she had already published some significant essays. However, this study, translation and edition gave her a place in the field, and more significantly, inspired the research of many young scholars in Early Modern Hispanic studies. She charted a direction by putting women's writing, well neglected for decades, in the agenda for research and teaching in the United States and Spanish speaking countries. In other words, she has contributed to legitimating the Spanish and Spanish American women's literary tradition. In the Preface to Untold Sisters, Schlau and Arenal underlined: "We wanted to discover and make available other materials that would lead to a fuller understanding of women's social, cultural, and intellectual history in Spain and Hispanic America." In the groundbreaking edition and translation Viva al siglo, muerta al mundo: Obras escogidas de/Selected Works by María de san Alberto (1998), Professor Schlau continues her previous project by incorporating to the canon a multigenre body of unknown works by the nun María de san Alberto.

Stacey Schlau's academic work is certainly multifaceted, interdisciplinary and deeply original. She has been able address insightfully some of the most important critical issues in literary and cultural studies and their clear implications in teaching. She has dealt with problems of race, class, ethnicity and gender in the literature and culture of the Spanish Golden Age, the Latin American Colonial period and Modern and Contemporary Latin America. It is obvious that her concern moves well beyond the aesthetics of Hispanic literature to explore broader conceptions of culture and history.

In Professor Schlau's research and writing, she demonstrates the unique ability of working from a transatlantic perspective and making connections between periods. Her research, writing and collaborative efforts also demonstrate a deep understanding of the philosophies, history and critical theories that dominate in intellectual culture today. As Professor Arenal mentions in her support letter, Schlau's latest book, Spanish American Women's Use of the Word (2001), "takes up the challenge of contemporary theories-new historical and critical race theory in addition to feminist and gender theory-examining them critically and suggesting fruitful applications."

Spanish American Women's Use of the Word is a comprehensive and lucid exploration of the intersection of social discourses in Spanish American women's writings, their criticism (in the United States and Latin America) and feminist theories. It is an insightful discussion of some of the most studied women writers, such as Gertrudis Gómez de Avellaneda, Clorinda Matto de Turner, Flora Tristán, Domitila Barrios and Marta Traba and a comparison of their works and projects with other lesser-known writers. It cuts across centuries to provide a different depiction of women's life, struggles and intellectual efforts in Spanish America. In many ways, it revises Spanish American literary history, proposing a new model to read and interpret women's literary and cultural production by considering their history and the events they witnessed, the ways in which the oral and written modes blurred, and the understanding of the continuity and ruptures from their traditions. I believe that this book by Stacey Schlau will become another indispensable reading among students and scholars in the field.

The proposed project Gendered Crime and Punishment: Colonial Latin American Women and the Inquisition promises to continue the level of excellence Professor Schlau has established in her previous work. It is well conceived, extremely relevant for scholars in many disciplines, and most of all, deeply original. There are many studies about the Inquisition, but they are historical in nature. This study will be different because of the diverse sources that she will deal with, and its linguistic, cultural and interdisciplinary approach. In this project, she will study women's writings accused by the Inquisition in Latin America and Spain to deal with textual negotiations and strategies of representation of their experience and survival. Professor Schlau outlines the range of crimes she will deal with: "primary heterodoxy, dealings with the devil, and lapsing into Jewish practices; secondary witchcraft, transgenering, blasphemy and bigamy." By targeting such a diversity of texts from different regions, once more, Professor Schlau will uncover a vast body of primary sources revealing hidden aspects of the cultural, religious and political experience of women in Latin America during the colonial period.

By her letters of support, reviews of her books, requests to evaluate essays and books for publishers, and Academic leadership positions that she has occupied, it is obvious the distinguished place that she occupies among Hispanists internationally. Professor Stacey Schlau has published in leading university presses for Latin American and Hispanic Studies and in the most prestigious journals in Hispanic literary and cultural studies such as MLN, Hispania, Latin American Literary Review, Modern Language Studies, and the Journal of Hispanic Philology. By looking at the quality and quantity of her publications and comparing them to the production of scholars in Spanish and Latin American literature programs in the most prestigious research universities in the U.S., it is clear that her strong record competes and, in many cases, supercedes the work of renowned scholars at these institutions. West Chester University needs to recognize the excellence and high standards in scholarship, teaching, and leadership that Professor Stacey Schlau provides to her students, her institution and the Academic community. She represents the ideal recipient of the Council of Trustees Achievement Award because of her love, care and commitment to advance knowledge in her field.

Respectfully,

Santa Arias

LOST KEY REPLACEMENT FEE

The University currently charges $25 to students who lose the key to their dormitory room. This non-refundable fee is charged to cover the costs to rekey the lock's core and issue new keys to both roommates.

In order to improve service to students, Residence Life has changed the way it handles situations when students lock themselves out of their room. In the past, the student was responsible for finding a staff member, who then had to access the building master key, escort the student to their room, and give them access. Now, students may sign out a temporary loaner key for their room from the front desk by showing their ID, let themselves in, and return the loaner key and retrieve their ID.

With this new lockout policy, three keys are made every time a lock is changed - two for the roommates, and one for the keybox storing the temporary loaner keys. Consequently, the Lost Key Replacement Fee needs to be raised to $30.00 which covers the charge of $25 for the lock core change and two roommate keys, plus $5.00 for each extra key over the two standard keys.
